

Why choose Hanseatic Moving Services LLC

We offer global mobility services with an emphasis on personal attention to our customers. The Hanseatic League was a commercial trade group in Northern Europe in the 13–17th century. As our name suggests, our worldwide partnerships have been built up through many years. The members of the Hanseatic League conducted their business on a personal level through partnership, trust and experience. The world has changed since then, but our mission is to bring back and be guided by these core values and principals. Our emphasis is to provide exceptional service on a personal level to our clientele. Our experienced staff can help you move, relocate or ship to any corner of the earth or just across town. Feel free to browse our site or give us a call!

Selecting the right Mover - Consumer Awareness

Selecting prospective Movers for your upcoming move in the past was accomplished mostly by checking the Yellow Pages of your local telephone directory, calling several of the area Movers for a free estimate and choosing the best Mover. In today's climate, Consumers will mostly likely use Google or another search engine brand for their resource tool. This explosion of data from Google makes the selection process seem easier but by the sheer amount of data and graphics it has made the process more risky. Traditional Movers have been slower to capture the new marketing gimmicks while the newer (so called internet Mover) moving companies have embraced it. This is the changing marketplace and the Consumer must be more cautious as they seek information on Movers to make their decision. Once you get through all the data and graphics you still need to know about reputation and dependability.

A competitive price with good service is a deal. Price alone is not necessarily the best avenue for Mover selection.

Moving is very personal since the moving company will take control of all of your possessions for a while which means you lose control. Trust is paramount!

Regulator's suggestion to the Consumer as with any retail/consumer transaction is to get as much as possible in writing before making your decision. Movers are required to have proper licenses and authorizations from the various legal bodies before they offer themselves to the public on a for-hire basis.

Before you commit to a company, be an informed consumer.

Not all moving companies are reputable, or committed to treating your move with the care and respect it deserves. Here are a few important ways to avoid moving scams, based on our experience with hundreds of thousands of moves worldwide.

- Make sure your mover is an AMSA-certified ProMover® if you are moving locally or long distance; or an AMSA-certified Registered International Mover® (RIM) with an IAM MX Validation® if you are moving overseas.
- Judge the company's professional appearance. Ensure they have an actual street address and check their standing with the Better Business Bureau.
- Beware of unusually low pricing; it's often a red flag for hidden fees and potential moving scams.
- Ask about the company's claims policy, process, and ratio (the number of claims versus the number of moves conducted). Expect detailed answers.
- Ask for customer references that you can check. A reputable moving company should be able to provide them on the spot.